Read the text carefully then do the activities.

Every year, a family of four in a big city throws away hundreds of kilos of food. Most of this waste is not old or bad; people simply buy too much, forget products at the back of the fridge, or cook more than they can eat.

Wasting food is not only a waste of money. It also wastes the water, energy and work that were needed to produce it. When food rots in landfills, it produces methane, a gas that contributes to global warming.

Fortunately, small changes can make a big difference. If families plan their meals and write a shopping list, they will buy only what they need. Leftovers can become a new meal the next day, and fruit that is too ripe can be used for juice or jam. As the old saying goes: "Waste not, want not."
